

Amorphous silicon photonics for nonlinear and quantum interactions

Amy C. Foster

Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, MD, United States.

Abstract: Hydrogenated amorphous silicon (a-Si:H) is a promising CMOS-compatible material for nonlinear integrated photonics due to its high nonlinearity and compatibility with 3D integration. Recent progress in a-Si:H for nonlinear and quantum applications will be discussed.

No Summary Provide