

Construction of an Intersectionality Scale for Black Undergraduate Women in Computing

Krystal L. Williams

Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia, USA

Ijaz Ahmad

Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia, USA

William Walker

Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia, USA

Imani Callan

Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia, USA

Lilly Steiner

Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia, University of Georgia, USA

Shriya Rasale

Louise McBee Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia, University of Georgia, USA

Abstract

Given a need for scale development concerning the intersectional experiences of Black women in computing, this preliminary study seeks to design such a measure while focusing on intersectionality within three domains—structural, political, and representational.